

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Her father and mother reported lost when the Dunraven was destroyed by a submarine, Carolyn May goes to live with her bachelor uncle, Joseph Stags, at The Corners. The reception of herself and her mongred cur by her uncle and his housekeeper, Aunty Rose Kennedy, is not very enthusiastic.

CHAPTER II—Aunty Rose rules the home with an iron hand, but is not unkind to the child.

CRAPTER III-Stagg learns from a letter from a New York lawyer that the child has been left practically penniless. Direlyn's sunny disposition begins to make an imprassion on the stern house-

CHAPTER IV-Carolyn makes the ac-pulntance of Jedddish Parlow, with shon her nucle has not been on speak-ing terms for years.

"Oh. goodness knows!" exclaimed Mrs. Gormley. "Some says 'twas his fault and some says 'twas hern. And mebbee 'twas a third party's that I might mention at that," added Mrs. Gormley, pursing up her lips in a very knowing way.

"One day," she said, growing confidential, "it was in camp-meeting time one day somebody seen Joe Stagg drivin' out with another girl-Charlotte Lenny, that was. She was married to a man over in Springdale long Mr. Stagg took Charlotte to Faith camp meeting.

Then, the very next week, Mandy went with Evon Peckham to a barn dance at Crockett's, and nobody ain't ever seen your uncle and Mandy Parlow speak since, much less ever walk

One particularly muddy day Prince met the returning hardware merchant at the gate with vociferous backings. and a plain desire to implant a welcoming tongue on the mun's cheek. He succeeded in muddying Mr. Stagg's mit with his front paws, and almost east the angry man full length into a mad puddle,

"Drat the beast!" elaculated Mr. Stagg. "I'd rather have an epileptic At loose around here than him. Now, book at these clo'es! I declare, Car'lyn, you've jest got to tle that mongrel up-and keep him tied!"

"All the time, Uncle Joe?" whispered the little girl.

"Yes, ma'am, all the time! If I find him loose again, I'll tie a bag of rocks to his neck and drop him in the deep-

After this awful threat Prince lived a precarious existence, and his mistress was much worried for him. Aunty Rose said nothing, but she saw that both the little girl and her canine friend were very unhappy.

Mrs. Kennedy, however, had watched Mr. Joseph Stagg for years. Indeed, she had known him as a boy. long before she had closed up her own little cottage around on the other road and come so the Stagg place to save the hardware merchant from the contimed reign of those "trilling crea tures" of whom Mrs. Gormley had

As a bachelor Joseph Stagg had been preyed upon by certain female larples so prevalent in a country community. Some had families whom they partly supported out of Mr. Stagg's larder; some were widows who looked atom. upon the well-to-do merchant as a marrying proposition.

Aunty Rose Kennedy dld not need the position of Mr. Stagg's housekeeper and could not be accused of assuming it from mercenary motives. Over her back fence she had seen the havoc going on in the Stagg homestead after Hannah Stagg went to the city and Joseph Stagg's final female relative had died and left him alone in the big

"And the worst of it is," grumbled the hardware dealer, "he never caught the mole. That mongrel really isn't worth a bag of dornicks to sink him in the brook. But that's what he's going to get this very evening when I come home. I won't stand for him a day

Carolyn May positively turned pale as she crouched beside the now chained-up Prince, both arms about his rough neck. He licked her cheek. Fortunately, he could not understand everything that was said to him, therefore the pronouncement of this terrible sentence did not agitate him an

Carolyn May sat for a long time under the tree beside the sleeping dog and thought how different this life at The Corners was from that she had lived with her father and mother in the city home.

If only that big ship, the Dunraven, had not sailed away with her papa and her matoma!

Carolyn May had been very brave on that occasion. She had gone ashore with Mrs. Price and Edna after her mother's last clinging embrace and her father's husky "Good-by, daughter," with scarcely a tear. Of course she had been brave! Mamma would return in a few weeks, and
